

Story events

The narration carries the story. Game tool calls show as a quiet line beneath the passage they belong to: muted text with a small tinted icon, no box. Only moments that need the player get a surface of their own.

ANATOMY

Under a slab of fallen stone your fingers close on cold iron: a key, its bow worked into the shape of a bell.

🔍 Perception 15 vs 12, passed
+ Rusted Abbey Key

- All events from one narrator turn share one line, in the order they happened.
- Items and people the narrator names become soft underlined links into the bag or journal.
- Tapping the line opens the full detail, like the dice math.

Ready. Sits inside the narrator message, above the passage it shows. Tap for full screen.

Generating. Space is reserved so the text doesn't jump. If it fails, the slot quietly collapses.

Images run nearly edge to edge with large rounded corners and no frame, so they read as part of the page rather than as an attachment.
